I'm trying to write a script that will run a program (in this case, openssl enc) and then create a.pem file based on the output of that program (even though the script is automated, I'm not doing this for production yet and need to have the results of the command) The command being run: openssl enc -aes-256-cbc -e -k testKey -in form.p7m -out out.pem I need to run this in a cron job and I'm having a little trouble figuring out how to get the subprocess to run. I've gotten as far as: p = subprocess.Popen(['openssl', 'enc', '-aes-256-cbc', '-e', '-k', 'testKey', '-in', form.p7m, '-out', out.pem, '-passout', password]) p.wait() Which doesn't throw any errors, but the
